Or it is a fictional autobiography. Anyway, I am, or was, a little boy. And I was blessed, or cursed, with photographic memory. I remember everything that happened to me until I was old enough to want to forget some of the things that happened to me. So I developed the talent for remembering things the way I wanted them to be. I also became adept at adding what I thought was missing from a good story. The line between fact and fiction got erased in the interest of--well, interest. The way I remember it now is better than the way it was then. And I was eager to grow up and tell my story--Alfie's story. Here it is. Starting when I, that is, Alfie, was about four years old, and Papa knew everything and was able to do everything, a condition of life which, in fact, declined with age--mine--but which in fiction is not so bad or noticeable. Now, looking back over more than seven decades of remembering, I think I, that is, Alfie, may still want to be as tall and as strong as Papa was.
