What We Really Value Apr 13 2022 What We Really Value traces the origins of traditional rubrics within the theoretical and historical circumstances out of which they emerged, then holds rubrics up for critical scrutiny in the context of contemporary developments in the field. As an alternative to the generic character and decontextualized function of scoring guides, he offers dynamic criteria mapping, a form of qualitative inquiry by which writing programs (as well as individual instructors) can portray their rhetorical values with more ethical integrity and more pedagogical utility than rubrics allow. To illustrate the complex and indispensable insights this method can provide, Broad details findings from his study of eighty-nine distinct and substantial criteria for evaluation at work in the introductory composition program at "City University." These chapters are filled with the voices of composition instructors debating and reflecting on the nature, interplay, and relative importance of the many criteria by which they judged students' texts. Broad concludes his book with specific strategies that can help writing instructors and programs to discover, negotiate, map, and express a more robust truth about what they value in their students' rhetorical performances.

How to Create and Use Rubrics for Formative Assessment and Grading

Mar 24 2023 What is a rubric? A rubric is a coherent set of criteria for student work that describes levels of performance quality. Sounds simple enough, right? Unfortunately, rubrics are commonly misunderstood and misused. The good news is that when rubrics are created and used correctly, they are strong tools that support and enhance classroom instruction and student learning. In this comprehensive guide, author Susan M. Brookhart identifies two essential components of effective rubrics: (1) criteria that relate to the learning (not the "tasks") that students are being asked to demonstrate and (2) clear descriptions of performance across a continuum of quality. She outlines the difference between various kinds of rubrics (for example, general versus task-specific, and analytic versus holistic), explains when using each type of rubric is appropriate, and highlights examples from all grade levels and assorted content areas. In addition, Brookhart addresses * Common misconceptions about rubrics; * Important differences between rubrics and other assessment tools such as checklists and rating scales, and when such alternatives can be useful; and * How to use rubrics for formative assessment and grading, including standards-based grading and report card grades. Intended for educators who are already familiar with rubrics as well as those who are not, this book is a complete resource for writing effective rubrics and for choosing wisely from among the many rubrics that are available on the Internet and from other sources. And it makes the case that rubrics, when used appropriately, can improve outcomes by helping teachers teach and helping students learn.

The Simple 6: A Writing Rubric for Kids Jul 28 2023

Rethinking Rubrics in Writing Assessment Aug 29 2023 The conventional wisdom in English education is that rubrics are the best and easiest tools for assessment. But sometimes it's better to be unconventional. In Rethinking Rubrics in Writing Assessment, Maja Wilson offers a new perspective on rubrics and argues for a better, more responsive way to think about assessing writers' progress. Though you may sense a disconnect between student-centered teaching and rubric-based assessment, you may still use rubrics for convenience or for want of better alternatives. Rethinking Rubrics in Writing Assessment gives you the impetus to make a change, demonstrating how rubrics can hurt kids and replace professional decision making with an inauthentic pigeonholing that stamps standardization onto a notably nonstandard process. With an emphasis on thoughtful planning and teaching, Wilson shows you how to reconsider writing assessment so that it aligns more closely with high-quality instruction and avoids the potentially damaging effects of rubrics. Stop listening to the conventional wisdom, and turn instead to a compelling new voice to find out why rubrics are often replaceable. Open Rethinking Rubrics in Writing Assessment and let Maja Wilson start you down the path to more sensitive, authentic style of writing assessment.

Use of Reflective Writing Rubric for Assessment and Grading in Diabetes Education and Training in Community Hospital Oct 27 2020 Use of reflective writing rubric for assessment and grading in diabetes education and training Background Learning is an essential part for professional development and using reflective writing rubric for assessment and grading learners for diabetes education promotes learners to reflect through assessment information to yield meaningful insights about learning and help connect learners to the overall program goals. Nurse educators from St. Luke's Hospital (SLH) explored using reflective writing rubric concurrently with the post program evaluation of a diabetes comprehensive training for inpatient nurses over 4 months. The course consists of 10 didactic lectures, case studies and hands-on sessions on glucose testing and injection technique provided by a multi-disciplinary team of healthcare professionals comprising endocrinologist, diabetes educator, dietician, pharmacist, quality and safety director and sport medicine physician. Aim This study aims to describe the outcome of using reflective writing rubric for assessment and grading of diabetes education and training of nurses. Method A reflective learning evaluation criteria using rubric (RLER) was developed to be used concurrent with the pre and post training evaluations. The rubric was developed using three domains which comprises the content quality, the critical thinking and the structure. Scoring was performed using the rubric. Only nursing staff who attended at least 4 education sessions were invited to participate in the RLER.

Three questions on what did you learn from the diabetes course training; why does it matter to you and what might/should be done better in our care setting were posted in the RLER. The reflective writing rubric scoring was set at a maximum score of 30 marks. Results A total of 167 nurses attended the sessions, of which 46% (76) nurses (Registered Nurses (RN): 51, Enrolled Nurses (EN): 25) responded to RLER. For those nurses who responded to RLER, 12% of nurses (RN: 7 EN: 2) reported (self-rated) they were good/excellent on diabetes care and management knowledge in the pre-course training. 91% (RN: 47 EN: 22) reported they had achieved good/excellent on diabetes care and management knowledge in the post course training. Based on the reflective scoring guided by the rubric, the means scores of RN and EN were 19.5 (range: 15-23/30 marks) and 18.7 (range 15-23/30) respectively. Majority of nurses reflected they had acquired new learning knowledge such as quality control measures in glucose monitoring and storage; use of shorter needle size matters to prevent hypoglycemia and effects of medications. There were more than 50 ideas generated to improve the care setting for the question on what might/should be done better in our care setting. Examples of these ideas include getting junior nursing staff to find out from RNs of whether any pre-meal diabetes medication was administered before patients consume home-cooked foods to prevent surge of blood glucose; establishing diabetes treatment goals for inpatients; gathering patients with diabetes from different wards to conduct self-care management education and provide education on effective nurse-doctor communication to discuss about patients presented with persistent trends of hyperglycemia or hypoglycaemia; providing inpatient diabetic foot screening service and many others. Discussion Reflective evaluation writing rubric could be used as a useful tool to create awareness of learners to reflect on daily care practice. The evaluation of reflective writing allows educators to solicit valuable feedback that can potentially be used for process and clinical care improvement at the bedside. However, many nurses are still not comfortable to pen down their reflections in writing, and more creative efforts are required to motivate nurses to participate in RLER activities. Conclusion Reflective writing rubric on post diabetes education programme promotes self-reflection and an enriched learning experience for both nurses and educators. The solicited feedback yield valuable ideas that are beneficial for quality improvement and future professional development for the organisation.
