Black Entertainers in African American Newspaper Articles: An annotated and indexed bibliography of the Pittsburgh Courier and the California Eagle, 1914-1950

May 29 2023 For the first half of the twentieth century, the best coverage of blacks in entertainment - especially the developing motion picture industry - was in the newspapers published and circulated by the African American community. This annotated bibliography adds to the first volume with easy access to entertainment coverage in two more of the most influential black newspapers during that time: the Pittsburgh Courier and the California Eagle. These papers were selected for their wide circulation, proximity to the two major American geographical centers for film production, and their high quality coverage of entertainment. The chronological arrangement allows the reader to trace developments in entertainment from the early days of motion pictures to mid-century. Quotations from the articles offer a taste of each newspaper's style, and extensive indexing provides quick access to names, titles, and subjects, making the book an invaluable aid to researchers.

English News Writing Jul 07 2021 English News Writing is a professional writer's handbook for newspaper reporters, magazine freelancers and journalism students who write in English. The focus is on writing rather than reporting. There is a thorough treatment of style, usage, and the many structures of news stories, as well as dozens of tips on how writers can improve their work. Specifically, the book includes thorough discussions of interviewing techniques, the inverted pyramid, speech coverage, feature writing, reporting on trends, reporting on public opinion polls, using social indicators to develop news stories, writing criticism, writing personality profiles, narrative styles of writing, question-and-answer stories, and the jargon of the journalism profession. Examples of news structures are annotated. The book also includes 42 Rules of Thumb that serve as a quick reference for reporters to improve their work.

Text Classification and Topic Modeling of Local Newspaper Articles from Local Newspaper RSS

Feeds Jul 27 2020 This thesis applied text classification and topic modeling to a dataset of 15,954 news articles from four local newspapers (Richmond Times-Dispatch, Hartford Courant, Lawrence Journal World, and San Jose Mercury News) among five news sections (Business, Education, Entertainment, Life, and Sports) obtained through the newspaper RSS XML feeds. C4.5 decision tree algorithm, k-Nearest Neighbors, and naïve Bayes are three classification algorithms used to predict the news section of each news article. The dataset was partitioned into different segments per newspaper and month. The overarching goal for text classification is to find which classifier is the most accurate and if segmenting the dataset and combining the results achieves greater accuracy when predicting the news section of each news article versus using the entire dataset. Latent Dirichlet Allocation (LDA) and Fuzzy c-Means clustering are two topic modeling techniques used to determine how the news articles group together without knowledge of the news section and to determine if news articles have the potential to belong to multiple news sections. All text classification models are partitioned into 60% training and 40% testing datasets. The most accurate global model was the C4.5 decision tree classifier with a 77.9% accurate rate. Overall, the most accurate model was the Lawrence Journal World newspaper segment decision tree model at 87.8% accuracy. The decision tree most often outperformed the k-Nearest Neighbors and naïve Bayes models among other segments. Segmenting the dataset into individual newspaper segments and combining their results brought about a 7% greater accuracy compared to the best decision tree model used on the whole dataset (84.9% vs. 77.9%). Segmenting the models into monthly time frames and combining the results brought about a 2.1% greater accuracy (80%) compared to the global 60/40 decision tree model. Using separate months for training and testing resulted in slightly higher accuracy rates in all but one instance Topic generated by LDA with  $k = 5$  reproduced four out of the five news sections. LDA also discovered subtopics such as University of Connecticut Sports, the Volkswagen emissions scandal, crime, and football within the dataset when  $k = 15$ . Fuzzy clustering could not match the news articles to multiple topics and it is hypothesized this could be due to the small size of each article. Additional areas for research include weighting terms by a scheme other than term frequency-inverse document frequency, such as grouping terms by various n-grams, and using a different stemming algorithm. Exploring models beyond decision trees, k-nearest neighbors, and naïve Bayes could yield more accurate results. Exploring relationships between newspaper segments and time frames could also provide more insights into the ideal time frame in which to classify news articles.

The introduction provides suggestions on managing successful discussions, as well as background information on the British press."--Cover.

How the News Makes Us Dumb Apr 03 2021 We who live at the end of the twentieth century are better informed--and more quickly informed--than any people in history. So why do we also seem more confused, divided and foolish than ever before? Some pundits criticize the news media for political bias. Other analysts worry that up-to-the-minute news reports on radio and television oversimplify complex realities. Still more critics point out that today's reporters can't possibly be experts on the wide variety of subjects they cover. Historian C. John Sommerville thinks the problem with news is more basic. Focusing his critique on the news at its best, he concludes that even at its best it is beyond repair. Sommerville argues that news began to make us dumber when we insisted on having it daily. Now millions of column inches and airtime hours must be filled with information--every day, every hour, every minute. The news, Sommerville says, becomes the driving force for much of our public culture. News schedules turn politics into a perpetual campaign. News packaging influences the timing, content and perception of government initiatives. News frenzies make a superstition out of scientific and medical research. News polls and statistics create opinion as much as they gauge it. Lost in the tidal wave of information is our ability to discern truly significant news--and our ability to recognize and participate in true community. This eye-opening book is for everyone dissatisfied with the state of the news media, but especially for those who think the news really informs them about and connects them with the real world. Read it and you may never again know the tyranny of the daily newspaper or the nightly news broadcast.

The Golden Age of the Newspaper Mar 27 2023 From the arrival of the penny papers in the 1830s to the coming of radio news around 1930, the American newspaper celebrated its Golden Age and years of greatest influence on society. Born in response to a thirst for news in large eastern cities such as New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, the mood of the modern metropolitan papers eventually spread throughout the nation. Douglas tells the story of the great innovators of the American press—men like Bennett, Greeley, Bryant, Dana, Pulitzer, Hearst, and Scripps. He details the development of the bond between newspapers and the citizens of a democratic republic and how the newspapers molded themselves into a distinctly American character to become an intimate part of daily life. Technological developments in papermaking, typesetting, and printing, as well as the growth of advertising, gradually made possible huge metropolitan dailies with circulations in the hundreds of thousands. Soon journalism became a way of life for a host of publishers, editors, and reporters, including the early presence of a significant number of women. Eventually, feature sections arose, including comics, sports, puzzles, cartoons, advice columns, and sections for women and children. The hometown daily gave way to larger and impersonal newspaper chains in the early twentieth century. This comprehensive and lively account tells the story of how newspapers have influenced public opinion and how public demand has in turn affected the presentation of the news.

the mind what sugar is to the body. In 2013 Rolf Dobelli stood in front of a roomful of journalists and proclaimed that he did not read the news. It caused a riot. Now he finally sets down his philosophy in detail. And he practises what he preaches: he hasn't read the news for a decade. Stop Reading the News is Dobelli's manifesto about the dangers of the most toxic form of information - news. He shows the damage it does to our concentration and well-being, and how a misplaced sense of duty can misdirect our behaviour. From the author of the bestselling The Art of Thinking Clearly, Rolf Dobelli's book offers the reader guidance about how to live without news, and the many potential gains to be had: less disruption, more time, less anxiety, more insights. In a world of increasing disruption and division, Stop Reading the News is a welcome voice of calm and wisdom.

The Newspaper Reader Jan 25 2023 This book allows readers to bring newspapers into their everyday lives by promoting the idea that newspapers give us the opportunity to perceive ourselves as intrinsically involved in local, national, and global discussions. The only book of its kind on the market today, it provides a base for the development of critical thinking, reading, and writing skills as it shows ways in which we can reference newspaper articles as we work through new ideas and problems we encounter. This reader contains timely and interesting selections, and its organization mirrors that of any typical newspaper. Selections are divided into a News section, a Business section, a Discovery section, a Sports section, and a Life section. Each storyline presented includes a sample of an editorial, a report, and a feature article. Storylines include: the Jessica Smart case; the USA Patriot Act; Jayson Blair and The New York Times; Amazon.com; lotteries; fast food; the Space Shuttle disaster; cyberspace; cloning; Michael Jordan; Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding; The US Olympic Hockey Team and the Gold Medal; fashion and fads; diet; and the 9/11 attacks. An excellent and exciting book that provides an excellent tutorial on how to read a newspaper for maximum effect and benefit. Will provide special insight for ESL students and others learning about newspapers and article-writing.

How To Write Special Feature Articles Feb 23 2023 This book is the result of twelve years' experience in teaching university students to write special feature articles for newspapers and popular magazines. By applying the methods outlined in the following pages, young men and women have been able to prepare articles that have been accepted by many newspaper and magazine editors. The success that these students have achieved leads the author to believe that others who desire to write special articles may be aided by the suggestions given in this book. Although innumerable books on short-story writing have been published, no attempt has hitherto been made to discuss in detail the writing of special feature articles. In the absence of any generally accepted method of approach to the subject, it has been necessary to work out a systematic classification of the various types of articles and of the different kinds of titles, beginnings, and similar details, as well as to supply names by which to identify them. A careful analysis of current practice in the writing of special feature stories and popular magazine articles is the basis of the methods presented. In this analysis an effort has been made to show the application of the principles of composition to the writing of articles. Examples taken from representative newspapers and magazines are freely used to illustrate the methods discussed. To encourage students to analyze typical articles, the second part of the book is devoted to a collection of newspaper and magazine articles of various types, with an outline for the analysis of them.

News and the Human Interest Story Jun 17 2022 In this account of the growth of newspapers in modern, industrial society, Helen Hughes traces the development of a mass audience through analysis of the origins of the human interest story in the popular ballads of an earlier day. She shows how such commonly found interests as a taste for news of the town, ordinary gossip, and moving or gripping tales with a legendary or mythic quality have reflected the tastes of ordinary folk from the days of illiterate audiences to the present. She explains how these interests ultimately were combined with practical economic and political information to create the substance and demand for a popular press. In describing the rise and fall of newspaper empires, each with their special readership attractions, Dr. Hughes shows how technological innovation and idiosyncratic creativity were used by owners to capture and hold a reading audience. Once this audience developed, it could be fed a variety of messages--beamed at reinforcing and maintaining both general and specific publics--as well as a view of the world consonant with that of the publisher and major advertisers. Hughes offers a persuasive argument for the continuing viability of this method for combined social control, instruction, and amusement captured by the association of news and the human interest story.

This has been done in the belief that it is important for the average person to know of the progress that is being made in every field of human endeavor, in order that he may, if possible, apply the results to his own affairs. The problem, therefore, is to show aspiring writers how to present discoveries, inventions, new methods, and every significant advance in knowledge, in an accurate and attractive form."
