From the decline of modernization programs to the rise of microcredit, Joanne Meyerowitz looks beyond familiar histories of development and explains why antipoverty programs increasingly focused on women as the deserving poor. When the United States joined the war on global poverty, economists, policymakers, and activists asked how to change a world in which millions lived in need. Moved to the left by socialists, social democrats, and religious humanists, they rejected the notion that economic growth would trickle down to the poor, and they proposed programs to redress inequities between and within nations. In an emerging “women in development” movement, they positioned women as economic actors who could help lift families and nations out of destitution. In the more conservative 1980s, the war on global poverty turned decisively toward market-based projects in the private sector. Development experts and antipoverty advocates recast women as entrepreneurs and imagined microcredit—with its tiny loans—as a grassroots solution. Meyerowitz shows that at the very moment when the overextension of credit left poorer nations bankrupt, loans to impoverished women came to replace more ambitious proposals that aimed at redistribution. Based on a wealth of sources, A War on Global Poverty looks at a critical transformation in antipoverty efforts in the late twentieth century and points to its legacies today. Gaokao essays are an important component of the National College Entrance Examination (Gaokao) for Chinese high school students. They serve as a comprehensive assessment of students' language proficiency, thinking abilities, and overall literacy. Gaokao essays and the IB Chinese exam can learn from and reference each other in certain aspects, but they also have some differences. Despite the differences, both Gaokao essays and the IB Chinese exam emphasize the development of candidates' writing and thinking abilities. By preparing for and referencing Gaokao essays, candidates can cultivate good writing habits, logical thinking, and expression skills, which are also helpful for tackling writing tasks in the IB Chinese exam. Furthermore, candidates can enhance their writing abilities and test-taking skills by familiarizing themselves with the writing requirements and evaluation criteria of the IB Chinese exam. It is important to note that during the preparation process, candidates should engage in targeted practice and preparation based on the requirements of the IB Chinese exam. Understanding the specific format and evaluation criteria of the exam and making corresponding learning and improvements are essential. Monthly.
