If you think that 1 and 2 Corinthians are somebody else's mail, then you need to think again. Paul wrote them for you and he wrote them for me. Right from the outset, his goal was far bigger than the city walls of Corinth. He copied them to "all the saints throughout Achaia" and to "all those everywhere who call on the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." They are God's message to believers in any local church in any place at any time. They describe the kind of church God can use. God inspired the Bible for a reason. He wants you read it and let it change your life. If you are willing to take this challenge seriously, then you will love Phil Moore's devotional commentaries. When the Jews were carried off into exile in Babylon, most people assumed that it was the end of the story. In reality, God was just getting started. As senior figures in the Babylonian and Persian Empires, Daniel and Esther would discover that there is no foreign ground for God. Their faithful obedience would, in fact, lead their oppressive captors to faith in the God of Israel. God inspired the Bible for a reason. He wants you read it and let it change your life. Alice wakes up in the hospital unaware of what she has been through and how long she has been in the hospital. The last thing she can remember is getting ready for a party... Eric comes to her rescue in the graveyard, He fights the master and thinks that he has won. Is the Master really gone? Her visions are getting more vivid and real. It is like living them again. Is she in love with her husband? Is that who she is meant to be with? Or is she in love with a Vampire? Lady Amelia Fairforth travels into the Alps looking for adventure, and finds it when she's bitten by a sexy werewolf, Lord Ebenoral Malveaux. Will their destiny be a new beginning? Or will it destroy them both? Less Story Excerpt Shadows hid Ebenoral as the Hanswald carriage rolled by. Who was the lovely stranger, and why did she make him feel both threatened and excited? When her coach had entered town, he'd sensed her arrival. The sight of her blond curls had him stirring in his trousers. Then her bright blue eyes met his gaze, and he went instantly hard. He still ached, though he'd regained control. A growl grumbled at the base of his throat. Okay, so he mostly gained control. He needed a drink, not some ninny girl straight out of department school. His body disagreed. It recognized her as all woman, taking umbrage to his thinking of her as a girl by forcing the memory of her lush curves to the fore. He turned on his heel and somehow managed a calm walk to the tree line edging the rear of town. From there, he raced through the woods at a speed still alarming to him. Ebenoral approached the castle-like manor his great grandfather had built. It belonged to him now, but at the price of his father's life. Too high a price. Too high. He fought a tightness in his chest. Without conscious intent, he brought to mind the sensual features of the newcomer's face. Her full lips. Her large eyes. Her blond curls caressing high cheekbones and alabaster skin. The tightness faded, giving way to genuine fear. Fear of what he might do. Fear of waking once again with a sense of, but no memory of, the horrors he committed. Fear of the full moon in two days. Adult Excerpt "What have you done to me?" he asked, staring into her eyes. His arousal pressed against her belly. Stunned, she blinked. "Me? It's you who've done something to me." "Are you a simpleton?" He cocked his head like a dog that heard a strange noise. Immediately offended, yet strangely titillating, she placed a tentative hand to his chest. Yes, he was real. She wouldn't wake from this with no recollection of the night's events. And she couldn't blame him for wondering. What kind of lady went wandering at night and laughed when a wolf came stalking? "You don't know me?" "No." He made to move, but she grasped his shoulders. "Think about it a second. You have to know me because I knew you before I arrived in Rift. Maybe not your name or circumstances, but... Haven't you dreamt of me?" Heat radiated from him, settling about her like a blanket. "I don't dream," he simply stated "I must sound insane." She studied his dark, deep set eyes and strong, square features. He was handsome in a rugged, manly way she found irresistible. She only wanted for better light. "It's almost a full moon," he suggested, his eyebrows lifting. "Isn't that when the lunatics come out?" "Did he bait her on purpose?" "Lunatics, yes. And wolfmen, apparently." His shapely lips quirked into a half-smile. "Is that what I am?" She laughed outright. "Don't tell me you hadn't noticed. I might be the one calling you crazy." The book of Job is one of the oldest surviving pieces of writing in human history. It also deals with two of the biggest questions that humans have asked throughout history - what is God like, and why does he allow such suffering in the world? Allow Phil to take you on a journey through the book of Job to discover insights that have shaped the way that people have viewed God and viewed humanity for over 3,000 years.
