Away From Her meets Strangers on a Train in this follow-up to cult bestseller And the Birds Rained Down After And The Birds Rained Down, a stunning meditation on aging and freedom. Jocelyne Saucier is back with her new outlook on self-determination in this unsettling story about a woman's disappearance. She might look old and frail, but she is determined to finish her life on her own terms. And on a September morning, she leaves Swastika, her home of the past fifty years, and hops on a Northlander train, eager to put thousands of miles of northern Quebec between her and her improbably named village, and leaving behind her perennially tormented daughter, Lisandra. Our mysterious narrator, who is documenting these disappearing northern trains, is eager to uncover the truth of Gladys's voyage, tracking down fellow passengers and train employees for years to learn what happened to Gladys and her daughter, and why.

Before I Go is in the memoir genre. Not only is it a book about growing up in Ohio in the 1950s and "coming of age" in the 1960s, it recounts the author's decade-long struggle against Creationists as a public school science teacher. Before I Go also presents Jim Walker's astonishing theological perspective which melds the world's religious traditions with late 20th-century physics and it briefly outlines his radical ideas about educational reform. Quite simply, Before I Go is a book that will be talked about for years and, in many respects, a "quantum leap" in the realm of autobiography.

A People and US Weekly Pick "An impressive feat...an immensely entertaining, moving, and believable read" (Atlanta Journal-Constitution), this debut novel in the bestselling tradition of P.S. I Love You revolves around a young woman with breast cancer who undertakes a mission to find a new wife for her husband before she passes away. Twenty-seven-year-old Daisy already beat breast cancer years ago. How can this be happening to her again? On the eve of what was supposed to be a triumphant "Cancerversary" with her husband Jack to celebrate four years of being cancer-free, Daisy suffers a devastating blow: her doctor tells her that the cancer is back, but this time it's an aggressive stage four diagnosis. She may have as few as four months left to live. Death is a frightening prospect—but not because she's afraid for herself. She's terrified of what will happen to her brilliant but otherwise charmingly helpless husband when she's no longer there to take care of him. It's this fear that keeps her up at night, until she stumbles on the solution: she has to find him another wife. With a singular determination, Daisy searches local parks and coffee shops and online dating sites looking for Jack's perfect match. But the further she gets on her quest, the more she questions the sanity of her plan. As the thought of her husband with another woman becomes all too real, Daisy's forced to decide what's most important in the short amount of time she has left: her husband's happiness—or her own.

Hats off to that brave soul daring to write what might be called speculative literary fiction.
